Commissioner Larry Scott Pac-12 Conference 360 3rd Street 3rd Floor San Francisco, CA 94107

Dear Commissioner Scott,

We are a consortium of advocates for women and girls in sports. Access to and participation in sports improves the lives of all students, and that is particularly true for girls and women.

During this time of COVID-19, we are writing to remind you of your institutional obligation to uphold Title IX.¹ We understand that these are trying times for collegiate institutions, including athletics departments. In response to financial pressures, we have become aware that some universities are considering program cuts to their athletic programs.² As the commissioner of the Pac-12 Conference (Pac-12), we ask you be a leader in ensuring that your conference and your members do not cut any athletic programs, and specifically, that they preserve women's athletic opportunities to participate and receive equal treatment. The data we have compiled from the Equity in Athletics Database demonstrate that women are facing serious Title IX deficiencies; they lag behind men's programming in every measurable criteria.³ The attached legal memo provides a thorough analysis of the data for your conference's members under Title IX.

As the Commissioner of the Pac-12, we ask for your leadership in upholding your legal and moral obligations to women in higher education by ensuring measures are taken to protect their educational opportunities. Indeed, we sincerely hope the Pac-12 will be a leader in gender equality in athletics, in service of the larger goals of higher education.

In 1972, Congress passed Title IX, and President Nixon signed it into law. In 1975, schools were given three years, until 1978, to comply with the regulations applying the statute to athletics.⁴ In the 2018–2019 year alone, at Pac-12 member schools, in sum (refer also to table below):

- 687 females were denied a sports opportunity, under the first test of Title IX compliance, based on unduplicated numbers.
- There are two other legal tests for whether an institution is providing enough athletic opportunities for women, and Pac-12 member institutions fail both of them as well.
- If Pac-12 member institutions were to provide women with equal opportunities to participate and add these 687 female student-athletes for the 2020–2021 school year, an additional $18,757,175 in scholarship aid would need to be provided for their female student-athletes in order to equal the male student-athlete scholarships.
- Moreover, Pac-12 member institutions would need to spend an additional $9,725,286 recruiting female athletes to provide this type of benefit equally to male and female athletes, as required by Title IX.
- Title IX requires not just equal opportunities quantitatively, but qualitatively as well. We urge you to review whether women's sports receive equal treatment in aspects such as: facilities, equipment, scheduling, marketing, coaching, recruiting, academic and other support.
- As a reminder, these are rare and rationed educational experiences for both men and women. Pac-12 member institutions provided just 2.4% of its students with a varsity sports experience in 2018–2019 school year.

and women's soccer, women's volleyball, softball, and baseball, or three women's sports and two men's sports.)

Denying women equal athletic opportunities is a significant loss. The research linking sports participation with life-long educational, economic, and health benefits is well-established. Sports provide males and females from diverse socioeconomic, racial, and ethnic backgrounds measurable positive educational impacts.⁵ Betsey Stevenson, an economist now at University of Michigan, found that playing sports actually caused more education and higher incomes.⁶ Girls who play sports make 8% higher wages compared to their non-sport playing counterparts.⁷ In addition, a sports experience changes a woman's short-term and long-term health trajectory including: decreased risk of heart disease, breast cancer, osteoporosis, tobacco and drug use, unwanted teen pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases, depression and suicide.⁸ Research by Ernst and Young found that 96% of C-suite women were athletes.⁹

Athletics is commonly referred to as the "front porch" to the university and thereby communicates an institution's values to the entire community. As such, athletics can lead the way towards a better environment for women on campus overall, including sexual assault prevention. Gender equality in athletics—as one of the only sex-segregated areas of your member schools—demonstrates substantively that Pac-12 members treat men and women as equals. If the Pac-12 and its member institutions' athletics departments do not treat women as equal to men, it cannot expect its male students to do so, either now or in the future.

The facts and the law are both clear.

We look forward to your leadership response before June 23, 2020, the 48th anniversary of Title IX. Please respond to this correspondence by email.
